THE CROPS OF 1916.

Last year the country had "bumper crops." The Department of Agriculture places this year's wheat crop at 611,000,000 bushels, which is 411,000,000 less than last year. Corn shows a serious decline, though not nearly so great as that of wheat. The hay crop is very large, which may compensate largely for the loss sustained in corn. From the standpoint of the farmer the small crop might spell disaster unless prices continue to go up. But wheat around $1.50 a bushel is regarded as pretty nearly the limit. If the foreign countries would take care of their own food supplies the American crop would undoubtedly be sufficient for home consumption, but the unusual conditions in Europe make a shrinkage in production a matter of rather serious concern. There has been some speculation as to whether or not a lack of commercial fertilizers, composed of potash, which comes from Germany, has had anything to do with the crop shrinkage. A study of the crop distribution shows that the potash shortage is likely not a factor for the small crop. The splendid agricultural methods which have been adopted throughout the United States as a result of the organization of farmers, has doubtless built up a condition that will make such a thing as a future crop failure impossible.

THE ADJOURNED CONGRESS.

They have gone—bless them! Washington misses the smiling countenances of the genial gentlemen who compose the Nation's Congress. Having finished their work, most of the 435 representatives, who lack greatness at the Capital largely because of numbers, are permitting their luminous lights to shine in the midst of their admiring constituents. And one Congressman within a broad territory sheds an almost phosphorescent glow, but put several hundred of them into an ordinary sized city, and there is a woeful difference. However, it would be distinctly untrue to repeat the statement that "a Congressman cuts no figure in Washington." In the Capital a Congressman becomes part of the city institution, and is regarded much the same as other citizens, according to his individual merits. As a rule they are a very high-minded, intellectual, worthy class of gentlemen. The personal good wishes of Washington follow these gentlemen through the struggles and turmoils that are likely to beset the pathways of most of them between now and the night of November 7th.

THE LOAF OF BREAD.

There has been a great deal of indignation expressed because the bakers in their national convention declared that bread should be ten cents a loaf. The public sullenly refuses to understand that the attempt of the bakers is not towards reducing the quantity of the bread, but to discourage the handling of the smaller loaf. Very logically they claim that it costs more to produce the same amount of bread in two five-cent loaves than in one ten-cent loaf. An editorial writer facetiously remarks that it costs more to sell potatoes and deliver them by the half-peck than by the bushel. He adds: "Who buys a wagon load of potatoes now-a-days and stores them in the cellar? Who has a cellar? The bin in the pantry that held one hundred pounds of sugar has been given up to make room for the graphophone. But there is still room for a few-cent loaf of bread in the kitchenette apartment, since the average family gets its supply of hot and cold water through pipes from the basement, and cooks its meals on an electric heater that takes up about as much space as a cigar box."

MRS. BASS, CAMPAIGN MANAGER.

Women and their movements have looked forward at such a tremendous pace that it is only a backward glance which shows the great distance they have gone. This is especially true of the last five years. The latest masculine group to realize the value of women's aid is a great national campaign committee. For the first time in the history of politics a woman is sitting on such a committee of one of the old parties. Mrs. George Bass, of Chicago, is the woman and her voice and her vote on this committee are important factors to the Democrats of the country. First and foremost Mrs. Bass is a feminine creature. She is good to look upon, with a smile that should be

BETHEL INN

Happenings of the Week

Dr. and Mrs. P. O. Brackett of Portland, Me., who were on their bridal tour, were guests at the Inn for a couple of days.

Mr. Henry S. Hale, owner of the Balsams, Dixville Notch, was an overnight guest. He said he always enjoyed visiting Bethel and the Inn.

Mr. Robt. Seavey, wife and daughter, motored from Norway on Friday to enjoy luncheon at the Inn. Mr. Seavey is proprietor of Beals Tavern.

A party from North Attleboro, Mass., consisting of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Whiting, Miss Edith Whiting, and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Thompson stopped at the Inn for a day's rest, after having motored through the mountains.

Business at the Inn has been remarkably good the past week. The beautiful foliage drawing many to the mountains, and the weather has been exceptionally fine for this season of the year, making automobile parties numerous.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanford D. Foot of New York, accompanied by Miss Louise von Bernath of Paterson, N. J., spent several days at Bethel Inn. They were so pleased with the Inn on their visit last year they decided not to return home without making us a short visit this season.

Mrs. Fisk Hammond entertained twenty-two at a luncheon party at the Inn on Thursday, motoring over from Maplewood, N. H. After lunch the young people enjoyed themselves about the grounds playing croquet, clock golf, etc. They left for Maplewood about 5 P. M., much pleased with Bethel Inn, and the town of Bethel.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon H. Cilley, and Wm. F. Dunsap, from Maplewood Hotel, Maplewood, N. H., were luncheon guests at the Inn on Wednesday. Mr. Dunsap is president of the Maplewood Co. and Mr. Cilley, Manager. During their short stay Mr. and Mrs. Cilley met many of their Bethel friends who looked them up as soon as it was known they were in town.

Mr. O. D. Seavey, Manager of Bethel Inn, was called to Boston last week by the serious illness of his brother, Mr. George W. Seavey, who died on Thursday. The body was taken to Waterville, Maine, for burial in the family lot on Saturday. Mr. Seavey may be remembered by a few citizens of Bethel from his beautiful pictures of flowers. He was considered at the head of the flower painters of this country. He went abroad to study with Robie.

Other prominent guests at the Inn during the week were—Mr. and Mrs. Moxey, Philadelphia; Maurice T. Fleisher, Jenkintown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Wilber, New York City; Miss M. T. Winslow, Boston; Miss A. T. Lovejoy, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Carpenter, Salem, Mass.; Miss Frances R. Peters, Bangor, Me.; Miss S. L. Mason, Bangor, Me.; Mr. M. P. Knowlton, Springfield, Mass.; Miss J. A. Ladd, Portland, Me.; Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Young, New York City; Mrs. Stephen G. Wheatland, Salem, Mass.; Mrs. Wm. S. Taylor, Deland, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Hemenway, Wellesley, Mass.; P. L. Spaulding, Boston; Wm. R. Driver, Boston; F. W. Story, Boston; L. W. Fellows, Farmington, Me.; Mrs. J. F. Fay, Brookline, Mass.; Miss J. V. Fay, Brookline, Mass.; Mrs. Edwin Patrick, Boston; C. H. Skinner, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hunter, Bridgeport, Conn.; and Mrs. J. P. Frisbie, Bridgeport, Conn.

BOY KILLED BY TRAIN AT WALKER'S MILLS.

Last Saturday, while the men who are working on the State road were leaving the gravel pit for dinner Wm. Tracy of Greenwood, aged 16 years, was struck by the up passenger train which was an hour and a half late. It seems that the men were taking a short cut across the fields to get to their dinner and had to cross the railroad track. Several had crossed the track and called back to the others to wait for the train but young Tracy thought he could beat the train and was struck just as he was getting across. He was thrown several feet into the air, landing on his head. The train stopped and took him to Bethel but he never gained consciousness and died soon after reaching Bethel station.

GOULD'S ACADEMY

A telephone has recently been installed at Holden Hall.

Miss Nellie Whitman spent the week end at her home in South Paris.

At the first meeting of the Y. M. C. A., which was held Monday night, the following officers were elected to fill vacancies:

President—Herbert Bean.
Vice-President—William Hall.
Secretary—Roger Sloan.

Gould's Academy Y. W. C. A. has made a good start for a prosperous year. Two cabinet meetings have been held and plans discussed for raising the Makenzie fund. It is hoped that four girls may be sent next June. Many new members are expected and with the aid of the faculty the influence of the association should be felt as never before.

On Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 20, the Y. W. C. A. gave a reception on Holden Hall lawn in honor of the new girls and teachers. For refreshments ice tea and all kinds of fancy cookies were served. The last summer's delegates to Makenzie showed pictures taken at camp and taught many of the camp songs. The interest manifested by the new girls and teachers was much appreciated.

An event of special interest was the reception given Thursday evening, Sept. 21, by the Seniors to the members of the entering class. The gymnasium was attractively decorated for the occasion with golden-rod and autumn leaves. The patronesses were: Miss Nellie Whitman, Mrs. F. E. Hamscom, Mrs. D. C. Philbrook and Mrs. Ellery C. Park. The entire student body with few exceptions was present, all participating with enthusiasm in the games which had been planned for the evening.

WEST BETHEL FAIR

Scores Another Success

The second agricultural fair of the West Bethel Grange was no less a success than that of last year.

By nine o'clock in the morning people began to assemble and by afternoon there was a crowd, coming from all parts of the county and Gorham and Berlin.

One of the good points of the fair was the absence of outside fakirs but there were booths presided over by the grangers where you could get ice cream, candy, "hot dogs," and all kinds of fancy work, and try your luck at ten pins and various other things.

The events scheduled for the forenoon did not materialize but the crowd seemed to find plenty to do and when dinner time came it seemed as though all had been working hard from the amount of food consumed.

McDaniel's orchestra furnished music for dancing in the upper part of the grange hall both afternoon and evening and never lacked for dancers.

The front part of the large Bean barn was again used as an exhibition hall and was practically filled. Quilts of all colors decorated the walls and articles and vegetables were arranged on tables. Young's Shoe Store had a large exhibit of footwear, H. N. Head showed shoes, hardware and cream separators, Edw. P. Lyon was advertising the Victrola and C. Rowe & Son, dry goods and footwear.

One of the most interesting exhibits was the antique corner presided over by Mr. and Mrs. Seth L. Mason where the following articles were displayed: Flax in the ruff and scythe, comb, cards and flax wheel and spinning wheel and the thread that was made by them, a linen sheet made in 1808 and spun and woven by hand by Mr. Mason's mother, linen towels, a punch work yoke made by hand 70 years ago, a linen tablecloth spun and woven 70 years ago by hand, fancy straw basket made by his mother 70 years ago, a wooden basket made with three tools made with pieces of fresh water clam shells and shumack, a slate that was carried to school 85 years ago, a baby's chair 100 years old, brass candle sticks and candle moulds, a tea set complete over a hundred years old that came from England and was used by Mr. Mason's parents, picture of the Annaguntlecock House at Northwest Bethel built before the Civil War, flax and flers with the linen thread thereon made 60 years ago, wooden chopping bowl that Mr. Mason's father made out of a brown ash tree and is 50 years old, an exhibition of antlers, powder horns, canteen carried in the war of 1861, sword of a sword fish, a swift to wind yarn on a picture which was drawn with a goose quill and the man made his own ink which was drawn 75 years ago, several old quilts and braided rugs, 2 embroidered pillows, embroidered towels; a doll made by a native girl on the Isles of Pines, Cuba, Mexican table scarf and several small embroidered dollies, Mrs. Carl L. Brown.

The school children had a display of paper owls, ducks, Dutch kids, etc., and Mrs. Bertha Sumner exhibited a lovely display of flowers.

On the fancy work table were to be seen many pretty articles consisting of 2 embroidered dollies, Mrs. Robert Thurston; embroidered towel and dollie made by Shirley A. Brooks at the age of 10 years; an embroidered dollie by Alberta F. Brooks, 8 years of age; crocheted shawl owned and exhibited by Mrs. E. P. Grover; pair of embroidered towels, pillow cases and sofa pillow, Mrs. Florie McIngle; a hand embroidered shelf drape and a hand embroidered piano scarf made by Mrs. M. S. Billings, a doll 52 years old, silk plug hat exhibited by Mrs. Fred P. Bean; crocheted dollie, Mrs. A. P. Brooks; an embroidered towel made by Shirley Brooks at the age of 8 years; bag made from flax by hand and a bag embroidered in Stilly; a pin cushion made by Ruth Cummings Cooledge, 6 years of age; embroidered towel, Alberta Brooks at the age of 7 years; outlined apron by Bertha Tyler at the age of 8 years; crocheted shirt yoke, Mrs. William Polwartshy; Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Head had a display of antique dishes and a shoe worn by Gilman P. Bean in 1834.

There were several quilts among which were noticed one made by Mrs. Hugh Thurston's great-grandmother, one made by Mrs. Walter Bartlett, one made by a lady in Newry about 60 years ago and owned by Mrs. W. D. Mills, 3 owned by Mrs. Marjorie Mason, a braided rug and quilt made by Mrs. Clifford Littlehale and owned by Mrs.

GEORGE W. SEAVEY.

Eminent Flower Artist Died at Home in Boston.

Those who remember the kindly gentleman that used to walk our streets last summer will be sorry to hear of his death in Boston last Thursday evening.

Mr. George W. Seavey came to Bethel on a visit to his brother, Mr. O. D. Seavey, manager of Bethel Inn, and spent several weeks among us. His genial presence and good humor endeared him to all who had the good fortune to meet him.

While Mr. Seavey painted all kinds of flowers and even painted portraits, his specialty was roses, which he dearly loved and which looked like upon his canvases.

At one time Mr. Seavey conducted a studio at St. Augustine, Fla., and he taught large classes in Boston. He was easily the most celebrated flower artist of this country and his pictures adorn the walls of many homes.

Mr. Seavey had been in failing health for several years, but the immediate cause of death was the result of injuries sustained in a trolley accident.

His brother and sister were with him at the end and did all that could be done to make the last days easy.

The following words written by a friend are very expressive of his life and work.

"I think first of the life-time friendship—of his wonderful traits in his own home, so efficient, so cheery and full of wit and humor, so tender of his mother and those nearest him—his love for his piano, his genius in making a home beautiful. And then I turn to his art. He was the greatest flower painter in this or any country for underneath exquisite form, color and technique lay the spiritual sense—the interpretation that not even constant training and study and even experience can do more than enhance. His lovely blossoms spoke to you of mysteries and wonderful beauty, only to be expressed through that medium,—dreams never capable of reach by words at all.

"I saw his pond lilies at Poland this summer. They made you feel the warmish water and the sunny lake as your hand dabbled amongst the long stems and lily pads and conveyed to me the delicate fragrance and the thought of light and shadow.

"It is strange to picture the industrious brain and hand ceasing work of the big heart stilled but we who knew and loved him should understand him as poor purpose if we did believe he has happily passed to realms ever near him so that he often caught messages and echoes of affection therefrom.

"I for one thank God for his splendid, unequalled work in art and for his loyal friendship true to the soul's depths."

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING.

Trene Querida France.

"Is life worth living?" asked a philosopher once, and straightway answered his own question so dearly that those who heard him forgot the world had ever carried sunshine and delight like "Old Glory" at the vessel's mast. He portrayed its disappointments and its limitations, its dreary strivings and its uncertain achievements, its good-byes too early spoken, its tears and all its vain regrets. He plucked out of the dead folds where frosts had done their certain work a few withered leaves and called them all of man's triumphs; he dug a grave so vast and deep that it yawned like a pitfall in the way of all who journeyed, and with grim content marked their certain doom. He painted his picture in November tints; he keyed his harmonies in a minor chord, and sought the shadow as life's phototype, forgetful of the golden sun that first must shine behind the shadow.

And all who heard him shivered as when a cold wind blows, and drearily made answer: "Indeed, it is too plain. The life we live is never worth the living." Then mother dear, (now in her heavenly home) who longed to counteract this dreary teaching rose quietly from her seat and brightened up the dying wood fire; she wheeled the couches into cosier comfort, drew close the curtains, so that a genial warmth diffused itself throughout the room, turned up the lights, and made all things bright and cheerful. And having done all this, she spoke such brave and cheery words that the gloom which had settled like a marsh fog was dissipated as before a smart breeze. She spoke of May, which lies so surely within the circle of the year as bleak November; she sang her song in tones that held the ripples of a summer sea, as well as the music of its unrest; she used chrome-yellows, rather than russet-browns and rainy greys, to paint her picture, and lo! the difference between a sunrise and a storm! She pictured the rapture of all love, even if the door of a brief, good-bye swings early athwart it; she named the grave a flower-bed, wherein the seed was gently hidden, to bloom again in radiant bud and snowy blossom. She grandly said that he who lives nobly makes life whatever he chooses it to be, even from its so-called failures wresting a valiant strength that girds him for repeated endeavors and victory at last. And the same company who had listened and believed when the dreary one spoke, took courage and exulted, saying, "surely life is well worth living, after all, and we will take heart even unto the end."

So you see the question, like a chameleon, is many-tinted. Viewed from a gloomy standpoint, like a beacon in the fog, it loses its radiance, but from a cheerful vantage-ground it sparkles like a jewel in the sun, or the glorious planet Venus or a rose in the dew. Our environments go far toward coloring it. Over a capital dinner the courage and the hope expand like lettuce in a hotbed. Over a crust and boarding-house hash they shrivel up like a toy balloon. If we could all of us attain to a philosophy that should help us to make the most of our surroundings, brighten up our waning fires and turn up our lights, and then take life between the thumbs carefully, as one gathers a rose between the briars, I think half the troubles of living would vanish like shadows before a bright light. If the world has given you a hard row to hoe, go at it like a man; and hoe it through and hoe it well. If your destiny has moored you to a wash-tub and a kitchen-sink, roll up your sleeves and make the wash-tub and the kitchen as attractive as you can. Pin some poems over your sink, that, while your hands are in the dish-water, your soul can catch an impulse heavenward, as a climber keeps his eye away from the difficult places where his feet must stand. Be plucky, and meet trouble like a hero. The harder the blow the more credit to the man who stands and takes them, rather than he who whimpers and runs like a scared child. Half the little things in life, and many of the big ones, too, are of less account than the stone lions that guard an entranceway, if we march upon them steadily. Only remember, to him who stands and trembles, the lions are always lions; to him who keeps his eyes upon the places where his feet must stand, the shining of the sunset skies, the revealings of the wind-swept spaces and the grand uplifting of the hills can never be disclosed.

priceless in filling a ballot box. For the last fifteen years Mrs. Bass has been associated with all the progressive activities of women throughout the country. Out in Chicago where Mrs. Bass will vote for President for the first time, she ever has been in the vanguard of those interested in improving the condition of dependent women and children. She was one of the original group who secured the passage of the Juvenile Court law in Illinois. Then not satisfied with this effort she with other women founded and organized the famous Juvenile Court of Cook County. In Chicago where women's influence has been strongly felt she early championed the extension of the small park system, then she was one of the first to urge the municipal playground system, free bathing beaches and an increase of the recreation facilities in the school system. Indeed she was one of the first agitators in the country to open to the people the public schools for evening meetings. She was one of the originators in Chicago for civic male and, last but not least, she played a most important part in the passage by the Illinois legislature of the suffrage act that gave woman the vote.

THE EXPENSE OF PEACE.

Unofficial estimates place the expense of the Mexican Expedition and the assembly of the National Guard at the border at $15,000,000 per month. This average cost per month began immediately after the Columbus raid last March. The expense of returning the 15,000 guardsmen ordered demobilized to their homes cost more than $600,000. Just what the United States will do with all these claims against Mexico is not known. Foreign countries have all prepared large claims against Mexico. It is said that Great Britain is likely to present its bill against Mexico for the murder of her nationals and the destruction of property and trade, for payment through the United States. The same course may be followed by other countries.

THE ROCKY OLD ROCK ISLAND.

The stockholders of the Rock Island Company have seen their $150,000,000 in stock vanish in thin air. The receiver was only able to realize $11,000 for the creditors. The Rock Island Company was one of the greatest of "mushrooms" to railroad financing. It was organized in 1902 with $95,000,000 common, and $54,000,000 preferred, to hold all the stock of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, which was the operating company. The relations between the holding companies and the operating company have long since been dissolved, and Rock Island common and preferred have been for some time stricken from the Stock Exchange after selling for a few cents less than they did for dollars a share in the days of the railroad's exploitation. The operating company itself is in the hands of receivers, with little chance of rehabilitation except on the payment by stockholders of an assessment of $40 a share.

CROOKER LAND AND PEARY.

The sciences of Admiral Peary are attempting to throw discredit on his great work because the McMillan Expedition finds that Crocker Land does not exist. It turned out to be a mirage such as the desert places of the earth frequently produce. A careful examination of the Peary claims shows that his North Pole discovery is not at all affected by his mistake in the above matter. Peary has the confidence of scientific men throughout the world, and a little tempest in a teapot is going to be sufficient to shake the confidence which rests in him.

THE LAND MEN SHUN.

Where There is Plenty of Land, But No Real Estate—Solitude, Silence, Drought.—From San Diego to El Centro—Stage Trip Across the Mountains—Thermometer Jumps 50 Degrees in Less Than Eight Hours.

(M. J. Brown.)

When you get into San Diego you must back up to get out—there is only one way in or out, and that is back to Los Angeles the same way you came in.

For a long time a railroad has been in the building from San Diego to the Imperial Valley, via Mexico, for some miles, but the financial condition, Mexican troubles and the floods have held it up.

So if one wants to get over into the valley he must either hike back or take an auto stage for 100 miles across the mountains. And take it from me, take the stage. It will be one of the greatest trips you ever enjoyed—or shivered over.

There won't be one minute you are not interested in some way—enjoying the grandest scenery on earth, shivering with apprehension as the big car takes reverse curves with its axles hanging over a gorge a quarter of a mile straight down, or trying to get a breath of air in a mountain pocket where the merciless sun is like a blaze. Sixty-five when you leave San Diego, 115 when you arrive at El Centro—a change of 50 degrees in eight hours. That is warning if up some.

I had very little idea of this trip when I laid down my dollars for a ticket. If I had known the road ahead, perhaps I would have thought it over—and walked. I heard someone say he was going across to the Imperial Valley by stage. I was, too.

I had an idea—rather I didn't have any, but a mind picture—that the trip would be across a desert plain, level, hot and dusty. As I waited in the barn for the car to load, I heard a talk that gave me an idea this trip wasn't to be a joy ride.

One of the passengers, a Jew, was talking with the stage agent. He said he did not like the looks of the driver and asked if he was safe and steady.

The driver was busy tying suit cases onto the running board and I had been looking him over. He was rough-looking from the fact that he hadn't shaved in a week or more.

And the agent cut loose—"It ain't whiskers that will send you down the gorge or the absence of them that will keep you on the path. It's the head and the hand. That man has run on the route a year without a pilonp. You leave it to him and you'll be in El Centro at four o'clock safe and sound. But if you should get uneasy, just tell him you want to drive."

And we started, seven men and a little girl—packed in like oranges in a crate.

The first three hours were through the rough desert country, interesting to the traveler but hard to make interesting on paper, all the while steadily climbing up, and then we entered the mountains, and the awful heat of these shut-in canyons.

Ever take a trip through the mountain solitudes of the mysterious old Southwest? You'll pretty nearly have to to catch the witchery.

A lead pencil or a typewriter can't snapshot it. You have to see it, breathe it, feel it. You have to see the sand, the scrub, the iridescent cañon, the bear-brown mountains, craggy as ice-bergs, clothed by ravines. You have to look up at a dead volcano and down at a gorge where once a terrible torrent tossed mountains of stone around like puff balls; you have to see a chaos of mesa and mountain, a medley of volcanic spire and eroded plain; you have to see the mountains of solid rock heaved up in the long-ago ages, lifting their heads to the hot sun; the bronze, the lavender, the turquoise, every color of the rainbow—you have to see all of these. You have to stand there and let the mystery of ages seep into your blood. You have to go back to the stone ages, the days before fire, the age of the Aztecs and the Cliff Dwellers.

And you wonder, you more than wonder.

And then the driver who has been watering his engine at a mountain spring, sings out "All aboard," and you came back to 1916, brush the Toltec dust out of your eyes, look over the Mexican crisis, and see if your suitcase is securely strapped to the Cadillac.

Painting Your House the Right Color

Paint means more than simply weather protection for a house. But the colors must blend properly to make a new-painted house attractive in appearance.

Of course, Bay State is the paint to use. New England made—that guarantees its quality.

If your dealer doesn't handle Bay State Paints—and there is a Bay State Paint for every requirement—send us his name. Ask for illustrated booklet, a valuable aid to the householder.

Rounding a curve, a hundred feet below you see a glare in the sunlight. It is the mashed junk pile of an auto. The driver may have been clean-shaven, but he is dead. He may have thought he knew how to drive a car through the snakey roads of the mountains faster than the driver of the stage line. What he thought we don't know, for he went over the bank with his machine and he can't tell what he thought when they found him.

To one who loves the lonely places these mountains are fascinating. There is something about the solitude, the grandeur and the stupendousness that gets you. You stand there and look up, and look down. Above are the dead volcanoes that made this barren land—mountains rock-ribbed and ancient as the sun. Everywhere is solitude, silence. There is not a living or stirring thing, except the desert lizards that silently scurry across the path. Silence, stillness, heat.

You look across the canyon as far as the eye can reach and not one green thing can be seen. Everything is burned up, dried up. Nothing grows, nothing lives. It is the Last Land on Earth. It oppresses yet fascinates; repels yet attracts. You stand off there and realize your insignificance. You realize that you are but a pigmy, but an atom of the great order of things, and when the driver calls out "Let's shove along," you look at the modern auto, up at the overhanging hills, look over the land of age and mystery and then at the wrist-watch tourist in the back seat of the auto—you jerk yourself out of the trance of the dead past, take drink from the canteen, ask for a cigarette, and come back to life.

Nobody seems to want this man-made country badly enough to live in it. I suppose one could get it by the thousands acres for the asking. It's a forsaken country—a manless country.

And yet—

We run along and a tire goes soft. The driver says it will take a half hour to fix it. The passengers stick to their seats, not caring to risk the awful heat of the sun. I go on down the trail, and there I see a tent, and I find a white man living in it—not a "bad man" who holds up auto stages and exacts tribute, but a man from the market places, a man of culture, education, and refinement—a graduate from a mine school.

He has his tent stretched on the mountain side by a bit of a spring. He had been there nearly a year. He had specimens and assays that would make you want to quit the stage and take a chance in the land of silence. Nothing to it. There were the specimens, there the San Francisco assay reports. He had California by the slack of the pants. He had the goods. He wanted me to walk over the lines and to know, as he knew, that he was secure in his claims.

I didn't have the time or the inclination. I admitted that he had all he claimed or even hoped for, but I had not the heart to tell him that it would be years before the markets would find a path to his find, and that when railroads had built in, when the stamps or the cyanide system had developed his holdings he would have been a lost checker on the board of fate.

And then we moved along. We had dinner at a mountain ranch where they served cantaloupe, tomatoes, cucumbers—and I forgot the prospectors.

And we went on down, out of the mountains, into the world-famous Imperial Valley.

We struck the cement road (where the autos run slowly because the road sucks off its tires). From the mountains of desert and dryness, we spin out into the plains of plenty—and water.

You smell it—see it. Fields of alfalfa grow about as fast as machines or cattle can eat them. It is a wonderful land of richness—and heat. The thermometer stands at 110. You hear a ranch owner tell the station agent he wants a solid train to take his melons out the first of the week. You hear a stockyard man quoting prices on fat steers that will take your breath away.

It is a once-desert country that has water poured in it, and it can beat any place in the U. S. about 60 days in getting stuff on the market. It's a wonderful valley, there is none like it. It grows while you sleep (or try to) and swat. The stuff just pushes up and makes you rich.

But say—

If "Barbara Worth" had to be won in midsummer; if she had to be courted and potted with the mercury standing at from 100 to 115—well, say, you may all have Barbara—I don't think she is worth the exertion, I don't think she is worth the winning. I would rather meet her in December—if you don't mind.

A GOOD FRIEND

A good friend stands by you when in need. Bethel people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. Mr. Heath endorsed Doan's over four years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony?

O. H. Heath, carpenter, High St., Bethel, says: "I suffered terribly from backache, headache and dizzy spells. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage, being entirely too frequent. I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Roseman's Drug Store, and in a few weeks I was entirely cured." (Statement given July 21, 1911.)

On June 8, 1913, Mr. Heath said: "I gladly give you permission to use my recommendation, as I am still a firm believer in Doan's Kidney Pills. I use them as I feel in need of them and they always bring me good results as they did the first time I took them."

Price, 50¢; at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Heath has twice publicly recommended. Foster-McIlburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

POEMS WORTH READING

THE HILLS OF BEAUTY.

He has turned the hills to beauty,
He has made the vales a light;
He has given the starry heaven
To the silence of the night;
He has made the way of travail
Paths of roses for our feet—
Yet we worry and we wonder
And forget that life is sweet!

He has taken all the seasons
And made each a joyous thing—
Made the clear, blue sky of winter
Just as lovely as the spring;
He has healed our brows of fever,
He has cured our hearts of pain—
Yet we sometimes doubt to follow
Through the sunshine and the rain!

He could mar us and could crush us
With the salt-same force that made
All the hills He's turned to beauty,
Every fair and fertile glade;
He has given us all life's music,
All its sweetness and its glow—
Yet we sometimes sit and grumble
At the things we do not know!

THE WIND AND THE LEAVES.

There is warfare in the garden, and the many are outmatched
In the struggle of the millions and the one;
For the bitter wind is blowing, and the yellow leaves are going,
And the armies of the summer turn and run.

Here they come, a flying legion, round
the corner, down the path,
While they seek in vain a shelter
from the foe;
By his furious onslaught scattered,
clad in russet, torn and battered,
Lost and ruined in the summer's overthrow.

Time was when they were allies in the April afternoon,
When the winter and the snows were
at an end;
For he touched the earth so lightly, that they issued green and sprightly,
And they hailed him for their champion and friend.

Then they loved him in the summer,
and he blessed them as he passed,
When the uniforms they wore were fresh and green,
And they trusted in him blindly, for they thought his voice was kindly
As he whispered through the coppice or the dene.

But they found his rough advances on the gray September morn-
Very different from his genial breath
in June;
For when the year grew older, his friendship it grew colder,
And he threatened and he piped a warlike tune.

So they fought him, and he beat them;
and the garden paths to-day
Tell a sorry tale of ruin and defeat,
For the cruel wind is roaring, and before him whirling, soaring,
Go the little weary soldiers in retreat.

A LITERARY CURIOSITY.

some one of the standard authors. This is the result of laborious search among the voluminous writings of thirty-eight poets of the past and present. The number before each refers to its author below.

SHOULD SLOAN'S LINIMENT GO ALONG?

Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an applica-tion of Sloan's Liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, backache, aches, bites and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. "We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp out without Sloan's Liniment." Writes one vaca-tionist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." PECULIARITIES OF STREAMS IN FLOOD.

Interesting features in the behavior of streams during floods are explained by a scientist of the United States Geo-logical Survey in a recent official letter. It has long been known that swift streams are higher at the center than near the banks, that driftwood moves to the banks during the rise and crest of a flood and returns to the center as the waters fall, and that foam is gen-erally abundant on a rising stream and absent from one that is falling, but owing to the imperfect development of the science of hydrology as applied to streams and to the special obscurity of the laws relating to the energies in-volved in stream flow the causes of these phenomena are not generally known.

It can be shown, however, that the intricate and bewildering play of en-ergy in streams, like all other natural phenomena, is fundamentally systematic. Different causes create distinct sets of forces, which act at the same time but independently in the mass of a stream. A single particle in motion is commonly affected at any instant by forces be-longing to several different sets, some local and some general, and the forces of first one and then another set may dominate its movement. The composite movement of groups of particles, consti-tutes currents, and the composite of currents constitutes stream flow. To un-derstand these phenomena it is neces-sary to study the origin of the different sets of forces and to see how they af-fect the currents and how the currents affect the shape of a stream.

The elevation of the center of a stream above its margins during a flood is generally the result of the roughness of its bed. Boulders, sand waves, and riffles, and even sand grains, turn parts of the current that strike against them outward from the banks and upward from the bottom of the channel. The particles directly deflected by the ob-stacles may move but a short distance in that direction, but their energy is transmitted to other particles and by them to still others, setting up a sys-tem of forces that act toward the upper middle part of the stream. All forces acting in a liquid cause motion until friction completely wastes the energy involved. Therefore these forces cause movements in the stream's mass that converge toward the upper central part of the cross section. This causes the center of the stream to rise above the margins until hydraulic head balances the deflected forces. The height to which the center of a stream may rise above its margins depends upon the size, shape, and roughness of the chan-nel and the velocity of the current. It is greater in relatively deep and nar-row streams and in rough than in smooth channels. Artificial troughs lined with paraffin, planed wood, rough lumber, sand, and gravel are increasing-ly effective in the order named in pro-ducing the phenomenon, and natural streams that have their channels in coarse material show a greater effect than those whose beds are in fine ma-terial. The phenomenon is "so pro-nounced in the rapids of Niagara River that it is indicated on the topographic maps published by the Survey.

The peculiar behavior of driftwood during floods is due to the fact that the deep central part of a stream, because of its greater freedom of flow, tends both to rise and to fall slightly in ad-vance of the margins. The swelling of the central part of a stream, during a rise gives shoreward movement to the surface currents which carries the drift toward the banks. During the falling stages the center of the stream is slight-ly depressed and the surface currents converge toward the center, carrying the drift with them. Eddies also play an important part in this phenomenon, for water is added to the eddy mainly at the surface and is drawn off some distance below the surface, where it is dragged away by the swifter part of the main current. This gives a surface slope toward the eddy and away from the center of the stream. The eddy be-gins to give up its drift only when the depression of the center of the stream due to the falling stage overcomes the shoreward slope due to the eddy.

The development of foam along the margins of rising streams is due to the escape of air and gas from the soil at-ter it has been covered with water. Ob-servation along the edge of a stream during a rise will show quantities of air bubbling to the surface and forming foam. Foaming is especially notable where the water rises over ground cov-ered by vegetation, but it occurs also even on bare, loose sand and gravel bars.

The effect of the act will be to re-quire the use of the standards in manu-facturing, sale, or shipment for all in-terstate commerce, whether the con-tainers are filled or unfilled. A large part of the traffic in fruits and vege-tables in this country enters interstate commerce. The law relates only to the containers and will not affect local regu-lations in regard to heaped measure or other method of filling. A special ex-emption from the operations of the law is made for all containers manufac-tured, sold, or shipped, when intended for export to foreign countries, and when such containers accord with the specifications of the foreign purchasers, or comply with the laws of the country to which the shipment is destined.

Standards of three capacities are fixed for Climax baskets—2, 4, and 12 quarts, dry measure. These containers, often known as "grape baskets," have relatively narrow, flat bottoms, rounded at each end, and thin sides flaring slightly from the perpendicular. The handle is looped over at the middle from side to side. In addition to fixing the capacities of these standard baskets of this type, the law also prescribes their dimensions.

The other standards are for "baskets or other containers for small fruits, berries, and vegetables." They are to have capacities only of one-half pint, 1 pint, 1 quart, or multiples of 1 quart, dry measure. Such containers may be of any shape so long as their capacities accurately accord with the standard re-quirements.

The examination and test of contain-ers to determine whether they comply with the provisions of the act are made duties of the department, and the Sec-retary of Agriculture is empowered to establish and promulgate rules and regulations allowing such reasonable tol-erance and variations as may be found necessary.

Penalties are provided by the act for the manufacture for shipment, sale for shipment, or shipment in interstate commerce of Climax baskets, and con-tainers for small fruits, berries, and vegetables not in accord with the stand-ards. It is provided, however:

That no dealer shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this act when he can establish a guaranty signed by the manufacturer, wholesaler, jobber, or other party residing within the United States from whom such Climax baskets, baskets, or other containers, as defined in this act, were purchased, to the ef-fect that said Climax baskets, baskets, or other containers are correct within the meaning of this act. Said guaran-ty, to afford protection, shall contain the name and address of the party or parties making the sale of Climax bas-kets, baskets, or other containers, to such dealer, and in such case said party or parties shall be amenable to the prosecutions, fines, and other penalties which would attach in due course to the dealer under the provisions of this act.

CULLING THE YOUNG STOCK.

By G. E. Conkey.

The close culling of growing stock is extremely valuable if you wish to up-build your flock, yet most poultry raisers do not seem to realize the important part this practice plays in improving the stock and at the same time increasing profits. Consequently, culling is not given the attention it deserves.

Whether you are in the fancy poultry business or if you simply keep chickens for commercial purposes, this subject deserves your earnest attention for you will make little real headway in the improvement of your flock or attain any great success in the business unless you cull constantly.

Most beginners cannot see the necessity of this weeding-out process, or if they cull at all they don't cull closely enough; because they hate to see any pullets go. Make a rule not to allow sentiment to interfere with your selecting only the best. Don't save a single poor specimen.

Start this selecting or culling with the newly hatched chicks and keep it up throughout the entire growing period. You'll find it doesn't pay to bother with any chicks that are not lively and normal in every way and the best plan is to dispose of these at once. Weak chicks usually grow weaker as they grow older and are likely to be carried away with some minor ailment. Deteriorating and fussing with weaklings will rob you of much time that could be put to a better purpose, and besides just a few of these off specimens will make a flock look very unsightly.

Where defects are slight and not of a nature to interfere with the natural movements or growth of the chick and when there is plenty of room, such birds can be retained and marketed as broilers but any defective chicks that are not killed at once should be marked in some way so that they can always be distinguished from the others later on and so avoid any possibility of their ever getting into the breeding pens.

When your chicks are two months old you can make a second culling and after that continue with the work every month or two until the birds are fully grown. Cripples do not improve as a matter of fact, most all defects are intensified with age.

It is not difficult for you to pick out chicks that have a crooked spine or breast bone, uneven hips, or a rouch or humped back, very tail, deformed beak, poor feet or weak legs and all these should be placed by themselves and prepared for the market. In most every flock there are a few chicks that do not keep up to the rest in growth or have a real thrifty appearance and these should always go into the cull class for when a chick is once stunted it can never entirely make up the lost ground and it is sure to be under-sized when grown. A weak head, long point of beak, small eyes, or narrow body with a flat breast all indicate some weakness or general debility and make the specimen eligible for the cull class.

You need not necessarily discard young fowls for failure to show correct feathering while growing because the feathers are continually changing and early defects do not always appear in the mature coat. If you want to do much culling for color before the last year is grown you should have considerable experience with the breed being handled. The fancier who has only a limited area for raising chickens may, by culling closely, during the growth of his chicks, hatch a far greater number than could otherwise be done. This means there will be more birds to choose from at the end of the season and the general quality of those to be retained either for sale or breeding will be raised.

However, do not take this to mean that culling is any the less important for the commercial plant or with laying birds. The successful poultryman of today is the one who pays particular attention to close culling and the proper selection of his breeding stock and if you want to make the most of your poultry business you cannot afford to disregard these features. Start to cull now if you have neglected to do so earlier and don't spare a single bird that fails to measure up to a certain standard of quality. If you will be thorough in this and then note the all around improvement that is sure to follow it is not likely you will be wasting much time on culls another season.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

(Dr. G. M. Twitchell in Maine Farmer.)

In view of the alarming disturbance in industrial circles, and the heavy burden being placed on the public, the ultimate loser, by the same, the question at the head of this article becomes both pertinent and necessary. Every man should understand the situation and what is involved. As one who has by his own work earned every dollar he has had, it is fair to presume that sympathy would be with other men who work, and so it is, and will be. At the same time, there is a great distinction between the man who works and the one who is worked. No one can regret any movement for the betterment of the condition of the laboring class, but we must remember the man in the office often works far more hours than he at the bench or lathe. The hardest form of labor falls on the men who must find an outlet for all surplus products. It is easy to produce to the maximum, but a far more difficult task to find an open market for goods manufactured. Neither of these classes can find profit without the hearty support of the other. You cannot divorce labor and capital and not spell disaster to all.

Whatever curtails the earnings of the laborer, hurts all round, and whatever checks production of mill or factory stops the earnings of the employer. We are all bound together by ties which no power can break without serious injury to each. Capital can exist without labor, but by the destruction of itself, labor cannot exist without capital to keep business in operation. When there is a drawing apart of either, there is sure to come disaster to both. In the light of present labor complications, it will be well to ask, who is responsible?

Organization is the watchword of the hour, and there is just as good reason for labor to be organized as for capital to have its gentlemanly agreements. So long as these organizations are for the greater good of the members, no one has a right to criticize; when selfish interests appear and take control, it is time to find who is responsible. Acting upon the suggestion of the general manager, the men of one of the many electric roads formed a union, which was right from every standpoint. The officials had just before increased the pay of the men, so there was no friction regarding hours or compensation. Within ten days a strike was ordered by some outside organizer—for what? No friction has appeared at any point, but the strike came simply for the recognition of the union by the corporation, that recognition to carry with it the right of the union to settle all matters of dispute, say who should and who should not be discharged, what wages must be paid, and practically take over the government and management of the business, leaving for the corporation only the getting of the money to pay salaries and expenses.

Who is responsible for the complications which seriously affect business in that center?

In another city the plumbers have voted that no work will be done on a building where non-union carpenters, painters or other workers have been employed. In this case the owner cannot drive a nail without jeopardizing the work of finishing his house. This is not for the good of the laboring man, but in the interests of agitators who go about leading into difficulty and fermenting trouble for the greater profit which may be theirs. Such radical demands never originate with the rank and file of the laborers, and in the end, the man who works are the ones who suffer jointly with those who employ.

It looks as though we were coming to a period of compulsory arbitration, but just how that is to be worked out under our form of government is the problem that rises, big on the horizon. Let us not forget that all this extra expense caused by these disturbances finally falls back upon the ultimate consumer, who must pay more for what he buys, and this, too, on the necessities of life.

The right of every man to work, and to a fair wage for the work done, is something too sacred to be tampered with by any selfish interest. To deny any man the right to work as many hours as his health will permit is bondage to cruel and unjust masters, no matter where you find them. The shorter hours of labor will be a curse to any man who does not utilize the extra time for his own best good. Idleness can never be a promoter of prosperity for individual or corporation. I would stand with every man for the organization into unions for mutual help, to aid the richer and better purposes of life and eliminate all factors which could detract from what was best for individual and family life. I would oppose whatever would hamper or bind a man, restrict the freedom of his hands or head to do and be their best.

So it is well to follow the trend of events and keep close tab on the influences which seek to dominate in the field of labor, or capital, and so be well prepared to stand for that eternal principle of justice which sometimes will make for the better good of all and

MAINE AND U. S. LAWS ON MIGRATORY BIRDS.

A large percentage of the inquiries received at the office of the Maine Inland Fish and Game Commission concerning the new United States regulations of hunting the migratory birds also contain a request for information as to why the United States law differs from our State of Maine laws—many if not all of the inquiries having failed to understand why they should conflict. Chairman Harry B. Austin of the Maine Commission was asked recently as to how it could be explained to the satisfaction of all and said:

"The Maine Commissioners of Inland Fisheries and Game has ever been willing and endeavoring to work in complete accord with the United States officials in the protection and propagation of the game birds. Our laws have been framed with that object in view. Our orders have been issued to all wardens with the same end. We had so far succeeded that all our regulations were made by legislation at the last session of the Maine Legislature to conform to the United States laws with the exception of the Maine season on woodcock in our eight northern counties.

"When the proposed United States regulations were brought to our attention I entered into communication with the Bureau of Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture in an endeavor to secure, if possible, a co-operation to the extent that the United States officials would not promulgate rules which would cause confusion and endless trouble for the thousands of hunters who come to Maine to enjoy the wonderful sport offered by our rivers and lakes. I first wrote early in June—the 8th, I think. Not being assured of what we were seeking for the welfare of our own people and our visiting sportsmen, I again wrote, on Aug. 2, as follows:

H. W. Henshaw, Esq., Chief of Bureau of Biological Survey, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: Referring further to the matter of the proposed amendments to the Migratory Bird Regulations, about which I wrote you under date of June 8th, last, I beg to say that I find many of our citizens are objecting to the proposed changes, taking the same ground as I did in my letter above referred to, that at the last session of our Legislature our bird laws were amended to coincide with the Federal Regulations in all respects except in the case of the woodcock season in our eight northern counties, and further claiming that if the proposed regulations are adopted much confusion will be occasioned the coming season.

I wish to reiterate my former opinion, that this Commission as yet sees no general demand for changes in the Federal Regulations in this State.

Very respectfully yours, Harry B. Austin, Chairman.

"The answer to this letter as will be seen was somewhat delayed, but the United States regulations appeared and went into effect on very short notice, to the annoyance of every sportsman in the country and so far as we can learn to the satisfaction and with the approval of no one. We did our best to secure the approval of the United States officials of regulations which would 'fit' the State of Maine conditions—we got just what people in Washington wrote out and obliged Maine to accept."

United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Biological Survey, Washington, D. C., August 29, 1916.

Mr. Harry B. Austin, Chairman, Commissioners of Inland Fisheries and Game, Augusta, Maine.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your letter of August 2 in regard to the proposed changes in the regulations under the Federal Migratory Bird Law. Please accept my apologies for the delay in answering it. It was mislaid or it would have been answered promptly.

The Bureau gave careful consideration to your recommendations of June 8 and to all other requests and recommendations for changes in the regulations and its conclusions are incorporated in the new regulations which were adopted August 21.

It is to be regretted that new regulations could not be made to coincide in all instances with State laws but it is hoped the seasons prescribed in the new regulations will prove to be satisfactory and meet with the approval of the sportsmen of your State. While some persons still believe them to be susceptible to improvement in some respects, I am sure you will find them, as a whole, more satisfactory than the old regulations.

Very truly yours, H. W. Henshaw, Chief, Biological Survey.

It is the man, and not the plan, that brings success.

PLEASURE AND PROFIT.

Genuine Satisfaction in Successful Management of a Profitable Dairy Business.

Most people are interested in getting as much enjoyment out of their work as possible, yet comparatively few can devote all their time to pleasure seeking without thought of financial return. Some wealthy men have constructed beautiful buildings and placed fine cattle on their country places simply for pleasure and with little hope of ultimate profit. As a companion picture, the dairy experts of the department have called attention recently to the genuine satisfaction that is felt by the truly successful dairyman whose well-bred, well-fed cows are sheltered by a well-built modern dairy barn of moderate price, and whose business pays a fair profit on every invested dollar.

As population increases, land advances in price, and dairying becomes more popular because the increased demand for milk, cream, cheese, butter, and ice cream enables the well-managed dairy farm to pay a profit, even on high-priced land. As in any other productive enterprise, successful dairying depends upon two great principles—economical production, and the successful marketing of the products.

Economical production of dairy products depends primarily upon the cow and upon intelligent feeding, care, and management. The unprofitable cow is a burden to the owner. One good cow often brings in more net profit than a dozen poor ones. The herd bull should be from a well-bred sire and a high-productive dam, and only well-bred heifer calves should be raised on the modern dairy farm. If a bull of first-class breeding and good individuality costs too much, a number of neighbors may club together and buy a bull of better quality than any one of them alone could afford. In many localities bull associations have been formed to meet just such conditions. Dairying can never become highly profitable until the scrub bull is forever banished from our dairy farms. This includes the registered scrub.

If dairying is to provide either pleasure or profit, the unprofitable cow must be disposed of. The well-bred, high producer that takes her place must be properly and economically fed and cared for. Cow-testing associations have demonstrated that the feed of the dairy herd can sometimes be so selected, balanced, and distributed among the individual cows in such a way as to decrease feed costs one-third and at the same time increase milk production.

No one should expect to derive either pleasure or profit from a scrub herd kept in a poorly lighted, unclean, and fly-infested stable, or from a herd which obtains its chief sustenance from a near-by stack of wheat straw. Fortunately such conditions are rapidly disappearing and in some localities have entirely disappeared.

Economy of production, however, is only half of the dairyman's problem. The truly efficient manager of a dairy farm must furnish a first-class product, then he must go a step further and get a price that corresponds to the quality of the article produced. Highest-testing milk should bring a higher price than low-testing milk, and it is not good policy to sell the former at a flat rate per hundred pounds, regardless of quality. High-grade dairy products should always command a price in accordance with their quality.

If a dairyman's business is well conducted it becomes highly interesting and fairly profitable. The successful dairyman drives his business, the business does not drive him; he does not merely keep cows, but makes the cows keep him. Such a dairyman may be expected to manage his farm so that he and his family can get both pleasure and profit therefrom.

DECEMBER 3 TO 10 WILL BE TUBERCULOSIS WEEK!

Special Days Planned for Medical Examination, Children's Organization, and Churches.

December 3 to December 10 inclusive has been set aside as Tuberculosis Week in the United States, according to an announcement made recently by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

During this week an effort will be made to enlist the co-operation of every church, school, anti-tuberculosis and public health organization, lodge, and working men's organization in the United States in an active effort to bring tuberculosis to the attention of the people.

Three special feature days will be held during the week. December 5 will be National Medical Examination Day. On that day an effort will be made to get everybody, men, women and children, whether sick or well, to be examined in order to find out if they have any defects or impairments of their bodies that need attention. If examination is not possible on December 5, appointments will be made then for later examination.

December 8 will be Children's Health Crusade Day. It is hoped that at that time to launch a national organization of Modern Health Crusaders, an association of the children of the United States in the public schools, for fighting against tuberculosis and for better health.

December 9 or 10 will be observed, according to the convenience of the churches, as Tuberculosis Day. A special sermon and a series of talking points for ministers and others have been prepared and will be ready for distribution in the near future.

Last year over 150,000 organizations and institutions took part in the Tuberculosis Week celebration. It is expected this number will be greatly increased.

ADVANCED REGISTRY RECORDS.

How Much Better Milkers Are Advanced Registry Cows Than Ordinary Cows.

The following was made public recently by Charles D. Woods, director of the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station at the University of Maine.

Any one who has given any thought of study to the so-called official advanced registry tests of dairy cattle in this country must have queried in his own mind as to how much superior the average animals in the advanced registry are to animals not in this "blue book" of the elite. In recent years many facts have come to light which would indirectly tend to indicate that the standard requirements for advanced registry, as set by the different cattle clubs and breeders' associations, are not really extraordinarily high, and that, as a matter of fact, any animal, which the average farmer would regard as a good cow, could with proper handling and care make the requirements of advanced registry for that breed. Thus there have been published from time to time authentic records of grade animals making milk and fat production records which not only met the advanced registry requirements, but were nearly or quite as good as the very best of advanced registry records.

Again in the case of the Jersey breed, one of the largest dealers in Jersey cattle in the country has for many years advertised that he would guarantee any animal which he sold to make advanced registry. Recently this dealer publicly made the statement that he had never been called upon to make good this guarantee, or in other words, no animal which he had ever sold has failed to make advanced registry if tested for it. Requirements cannot be extraordinarily high which will permit one to guarantee that every animal sold will meet them.

It has not been possible until recently to make any comprehensive and exact comparison between the average performance of the cows of a breed not in advanced registry with those that were in advanced registry. Recently the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station has been able to make such a comparison in the case of one breed, the Ayrshire. The Station has on hand at the present time statistics which will enable such a comparison to be made for another one of the dairy breeds. The facts for the Ayrshire are interesting because there is every reason to regard them as entirely typical for all the other dairy breeds.

From this it will be seen that the American advanced registry Ayrshires outyield their Scottish sisters, on the average, from about one and a quarter gallons to three gallons per week, or roughly from 10 to 25 pounds.

All interested are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

In the case of the Ayrshires the comparison is made between the records of Scottish Ayrshire cows furnished by the Scottish Milk Records Society. These records correspond to American cow test association records in the following manner:

Whereas, the Maine State Sunday School Association has called my attention to a general movement having for its object the arousing of interest in Sunday School work and increasing of Sunday School attendance, and has requested me to issue a proclamation for the purpose of advancing this movement in the State of Maine, and

Whereas, the Maine State Sunday School Association has appointed Sunday, October eighth, one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, as "Go to Sunday School Day," to be observed with appropriate exercises by Sunday Schools of all denominations represented in the association.

Therefore, I, Oakley C. Curtis, Governor of Maine, do hereby proclaim Sunday, October eighth, one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, as "Go to Sunday School Day," and commend to the people the observance of this day by attending Sunday School in the church of their choice.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State of Maine, in the executive chamber at Augusta, on this thirtieth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, and of the State of Maine the ninety-seventh.

(L. S.) OAKLEY C. CURTIS,

By the Governor.

JOHN E. BUNKER,

Secretary of State.

Looked at from a relative standpoint it appears that the American advanced registry animals give, as two year old heifers or as mature cows, about 9 per cent on the average more milk than the Scottish herds. For the three year and four year ages the percentage is higher.

The standards for admission to advanced registry are just as high for the Ayrshires as for any other breed. It appears a fair question as to whether a standard which runs less than 10 per cent above the general average of the breed for mature cows is sufficiently high to get the best results in the direction of breed improvement.

For the real improvement of the dairy cattle of every breed we need standards for advanced registry which shall be so high that by no chance can any but very superior animals meet them. Under such a system advanced registry would mean a great deal more than it now does.

CHAPMAN MAKES A WORLD RECORD AS CONDUCTOR.

Mr. Chapman is the only living man in the entire world who has the distinction of having conducted an unbroken series of concerts for 20 years in any one place. And he has directed both chorals and orchestra and every number in the program of every concert given in the annual festivals at Portland and Bangor in those twenty years.

The splendid support given by Maine people to the annual festivals has given encouragement to Mr. Chapman and has enabled him to accomplish such an enviable record, and the State of Maine shares in the honor that has come to her native son.

Mr. Chapman has also another wonderful record. He has been conductor for the Rubinstein Club of New York City for 30 consecutive years, a record unapproached by any other musical director in this or any other country. The Rubinstein Club is the leading musical organization of women in New York.

With his usual energy and new enthusiasm Director Chapman is preparing for the greatest success ever in the festival of 1916. He is well pleased with the great array of artists and he expects to have an orchestra even better than any he has ever brought to Maine. He promises many revelations in this year's concerts.—Portland Press.

Whereas, the Maine State Sunday School Association has appointed Sunday, October eighth, one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, as "Go to Sunday School Day," to be observed with appropriate exercises by Sunday Schools of all denominations represented in the association.

Therefore, I, Oakley C. Curtis, Governor of Maine, do hereby proclaim Sunday, October eighth, one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, as "Go to Sunday School Day," and commend to the people the observance of this day by attending Sunday School in the church of their choice.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State of Maine, in the executive chamber at Augusta, on this thirtieth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, and of the State of Maine the ninety-seventh.

(L. S.) OAKLEY C. CURTIS,

By the Governor.

JOHN E. BUNKER,

Secretary of State.

Looked at from a relative standpoint it appears that the American advanced registry animals give, as two year old heifers or as mature cows, about 9 per cent on the average more milk than the Scottish herds. For the three year and four year ages the percentage is higher.

The standards for admission to advanced registry are just as high for the Ayrshires as for any other breed. It appears a fair question as to whether a standard which runs less than 10 per cent above the general average of the breed for mature cows is sufficiently high to get the best results in the direction of breed improvement.

For the real improvement of the dairy cattle of every breed we need standards for advanced registry which shall be so high that by no chance can any but very superior animals meet them. Under such a system advanced registry would mean a great deal more than it now does.

CALLS LEGISLATURE IN SPECIAL SESSION.

Governor Will Convene Body Friday, September 29, For Adoption of Revision.

A special session of the Maine Legislature convening at 10 A. M. Friday, Sept. 29, 1916, has been called by Governor Curtis. The adoption of the sixth revision of the general and public laws of the State, the disposition of money received on account of lands reserved for public uses and the alteration of the line of Portland Harbor will be considered.

The proclamation as issued from the Executive Department of the State House, Wednesday afternoon, follows: Whereas, the commissioner appointed under Chapter 237 of the Revised Statutes of 1915 to complete the sixth revision of the general and public laws of the State has completed his work and is now ready to submit the final draft of such revision to the Legislature, and

Whereas, the amendment to Article Four of the Constitution of the State, establishing a people's veto through the official referendum, makes it extremely important that any general revision of the statutes be submitted to the Legislature for acceptance at least 90 days prior to its next regular session; said amendment to the Constitution not seeming to permit the adoption of such revision under the emergency clause, and

Whereas, the provisions of Section 16 of Chapter 7 of the Revised Statutes, requiring that the balance of the sums received on account of lands reserved for public uses shall remain in the treasury, have become embarrassing, and the public interests seem to require some legislative action which will permit the use of the money now in the treasury to the credit of this account, and

Whereas, the inhabitants of the city of Portland desire to present petitions to alter the harbor line of Portland Harbor, which is a matter of vital importance to the shipping interests of the State and one that demands the early and careful consideration of the Legislature;

In consideration whereof, I, Oakley C. Curtis, Governor of the State of Maine, by virtue of the power vested in me by the Constitution, convene the Legislature of this State, hereby requiring the Senators and Representatives to assemble in their respective chambers at the Capitol, in Augusta, on Friday, the 29th day of September, 1916, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, in order to receive such communications as may then be made to them, and to consult and determine on such measures as in their judgment will best promote the welfare of the State.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State to be affixed.

Done at Augusta, this 15th day of September, in the year of our Lord, 1916, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 141st.

OAKLEY C. CURTIS.

By the Governor.
